H. R. 4868

To make the diversity of the American people a resource to promote national security.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

June 5, 2002

Mr. Crowley introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and the Workforce

A BILL

To make the diversity of the American people a resource to promote national security.

- 1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
- 2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,
- 3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE, FINDINGS, AND PURPOSES.
- 4 (a) Short Title.—This Act may be cited as the
- 5 "Minority National Security Scholarship Act of 2002".
- 6 (b) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following
- 7 findings:
- 8 (1) The security of the United States will con-
- 9 tinue to depend on the ability of the United States

- to understand, shape, and react to political, economic, and social developments around the world.
 - (2) Ethno-national conflicts continue to rage around the world, and such conflicts are often accompanied by the proliferation of weapons, human rights violations, economic and commercial decline, trafficking in women and children, the drafting of children into military service, and threats to American citizens and business interests.
 - (3) International terrorist organizations like al-Qaeda have established footholds in a number of countries, including both allies and adversaries of the United States, and attempt to use such footholds as bases from which to launch terrorist attacks on the United States and American interests abroad.
 - (4) The future national security and economic well-being of the United States will depend substantially on the ability of its citizens to understand, influence, and respond to ethno-national conflicts and the social and political factors that cause others to support international terrorist groups. American economic interests will also depend on the ability of U.S. citizens to communicate and compete by knowing the languages and cultures of other countries.

- (5) The Federal Government has an interest in ensuring that the employees of its departments and agencies with national security responsibilities are prepared to meet the challenges of this changing international environment.
 - (6) The Federal Government also has an interest in taking actions to alleviate the problem of American undergraduate and graduate students being inadequately prepared to meet the challenges posed by increasing global interaction among nations.
 - (7) American colleges and universities must place a new emphasis on improving the teaching of foreign languages, area studies, and other international fields, particularly of those far-flung regions and newly independent countries that have previously not been the focus of study in American institutions of higher learning, to help meet those challenges.
 - (8) By virtue of their intimate understanding of foreign languages, cultures, and locations, members of minority groups have the potential to offer the Federal Government their insights into political, economic, and social developments abroad, and the Federal Government should take whatever steps are nec-

- essary to encourage members of minority groups to 1 2 use their skills to promote United States national se-3 curity by making a career in the foreign affairs, security, or intelligence agencies of the Federal Gov-5 ernment. Furthermore, if the United States is to 6 penetrate terrorist organizations like al-Qaeda or 7 hostile adversaries of any kind in hopes of pre-8 venting future attacks on the United States or on 9 American interests, the Federal Government must 10 take full advantage of the diversity of the American 11 citizenry.
- 12 (c) Purposes.—The purposes of this Act are as follows:
 - (1) To provide the necessary resources, accountability, and flexibility to meet the national security education needs of the United States.
 - (2) To increase the quantity, diversity, and quality of the teaching and learning of subjects in the fields of foreign languages, area studies, and other international fields that are critical to the Nation's interest.
 - (3) To produce an increased pool of applicants for work in the departments and agencies of the United States Government with responsibilities for issues affecting national security.
